Fitchburg Blasts Hartford 28 - 0

Falcons Undefeated

By Shaun Rouine

The FSC Falcons coupled an impenetrable defense with an explosive offense to rout the University of Hartford 28-0 this past Saturday at the Bernadine Bowl in Fitchburg. The weather was nearly perfect and a sundrenched crowd of about 300 were on hand to witness the Falcons second straight shutout of the fledgling season.

The Fitchburg eleven wasted no time in taking control of the contest when Ralph Roberts picked off a pass at the Falcon 4 yard line, setting the stage for a 96 yard tear by Richard Loftus down the right sideline for the games first T.D. The point after was good, setting the score at 7-0, supplying all the points FSC would require.

The second quarter saw the remainder of the days scoring by the Falcons. Fleet-footed quarterback Dave Falkenstrom ran one in from the FSC 30 for another 6 points, with Junior back Gerard Coleman scampering around the left end adding the conversion for a 15-0 Fitchburg lead.

A couple of good connections between the sterling combo of QB

Falkenstrom and receiver Eldridge brought the Falcons down to the Hartford 15 and then to paydirt. The point after was successful and the Birds now enjoyed a comfortable 22-0 lead. Eldridge continued his domination, storming up the field after a screen for another 52 yard touchdown run.

The second half was basically uneventful, consisting mostly of Fitchburg holding Hartford deep in their own territory, frustrating a nearly impudent offense. The only time the action seemed as if it may perk for Hartford was in a long drive which took them down to the Falcon 3 yard line. But it just wouldn't come for Hartford today, with quarterback Steve Vadarus not getting it up quite enough and being intercepted at the 2.

It should be pointed out that the victory honors should not only go to the team but to the new head coach Mike Mezzocchi, this being his first season working with a college level team. Coach Mezzocchi comes to FSC from Lebanon, New Hampshire where he was teaching and taking a year off from coaching. The team hopes to continue its winning ways next Sunday when they take on M.I.T. at the Bernadine Bowl.

Falkenstrom rips big gain while cheerleaders entertain.

In My Opinion

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Salvatore's opinion column is featured on the front page of this issue for the purpose of introduction. In succeeding issues his column will appear regularly on the editorial pages of this news publication.

By Bobby Salvatore

I had a strange dream the other night. Actually, it was more of a nightmare. But I'll tell you about that later. I read in the newspaper a couple of weeks ago that students at Northeastern University declared war on Libya. It was just a harmless ploy to stir up student interest, so they say. But was it so harmless?

It's sad to see this macho mentality popping up in our colleges. This is the same mentality that elected Ronald Reagan and is allowing social and educational programs to be cut while even more weapons are stockpiled. I do not mean to single out the Northeastern students. They are merely one example of the growing "they're not gonna push us around anymore" attitude.

How many of you, I wonder, raised your frosted beer mugs in cheer after those Libyan jets were shot down?

How many of you, I wonder, wanted to see Iran erased from the map for daring to seize our embassy? They wouldn't dare do that to the Russian embassy! But remember please, we are not Russia. We are the United States of America. We do not drop bombs when there are other ways.

Now, about that dream. It seems that we had been pushed too far. We are going to war with some third-world country, Iran or Libya, or whoever - it doesn't matter. Caught up in the swirl of patriotism and wanting to fight for the principles our nation holds dear, I enlisted.

But then, being omniscient in my own dream, I witnessed something strange. It seems that our generals were meeting with our President - President Reagan or President Haig, or whoever - it doesn't matter.

"What do we do," asked the President, "if the war doesn't go as planned?"

"Why then we fall back," replied one of the generals, "and wipe them out with neutron bombs. We can occupy their country later."

That's when I realized that something was wrong. Aren't we supposed to be the good guys?

That's when I woke up.

And I asked myself, "Why are we the good guys?" One thought popped into my head - freedom. Freedom is what we stand for. And freedom must mean freedom for all men, not just freedom for Americans. So if a Khomeini, or a Kaddafi, or a Castro starts hurling taunts at us, we must tolerate it. If we truly believe the principles that our nation was founded on, we must be big enough to take criticism - be it valid or not.

So the next time you're getting enraged at some anti-US demonstrators, remember who you are. Remember who we are.

We are the United States of America. We are supposed to stand for something.

LSB Branch Provides Banking Services

By Catherine A. North

It's early Saturday afternoon. You decide to take a break from your early morning studying to go food shopping. Then, you look in your wallet, your hands begin to tremble, sweat starts pouring forth from your temples, and large drops of salty water dribble over your cheeks and splash to the ground because you have discovered an empty void. The walls of your leather wallet are touching because there is no money to separate them. You are penniless. Then you decide to go home for the weekend. But, there is another possible solution.

Prior to the opening of school the Leominster Savings Bank opened a branch which is located in the G-Lobby of the Hammond Building. This new branch offers such services as savings accounts, checking accounts, loan programs, and others including the Instant Teller (IT).

Anyone can open an account, and anyone who has an account with LSB can use the branch, Mrs. Kate Bean, branch manager said.

"There's been a need on campus for a long time. Many banks have shied away. It's a terrific source of new customers. There are opportunities for students," she said.

"There are advantages for the students and the bank," C. William Wester, president, Leominster Savings Bank said.

The students can get to the money. The advantage to the bank - to provide students with an opportunity to start credit with a local bank."

Approximately 75 students and others formed four lines on the first day the branch opened, John J. Boursy, vice-president of administration said, in a separate interview.

The new branch was constructed and designed by Crowley Associates Inc. of Leominster, he said. The contract was a negotiated one between the bank and the contractor. The construction of the bank didn't cost the college a dime, Boursy said.

Boursy collaborated with the contractor and the bank in directing this project.

People and Faces

The "Vicker" Phenomenon

By Toby Wilson

Fitchburg State College has the reputation of having a professional faculty composed of friendly and caring members. The spotlight focuses on two members who not only have fine individual reputations, but also have acquired unique interchangeable identities!

Lon Stephen Vickers and Marke Miller Vickers were united in 1976 in Colorado and came to Fitchburg State armed with a myriad of talents and educational experience. Lon received his Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from the University of Mexico. He later received his Master of Arts in Guidance and Counseling and a Ph.D. in Higher Education Administration from the University of Colorado. Marke received her Bachelor of Arts in Psychology and Early Childhood at Westland University, Ohio. She also received her Master of Arts in Administration from the University of Colorado where she met Lon.

Having similar interests including beaches, restaurants, backpacking, and crosscountry skiing, the magic of marriage engulfed them and they have lived happily since. Their jobs have been enhanced by their mutual cooperation, and their philosophy of "loyalty to one college" shows in the quality of their work.

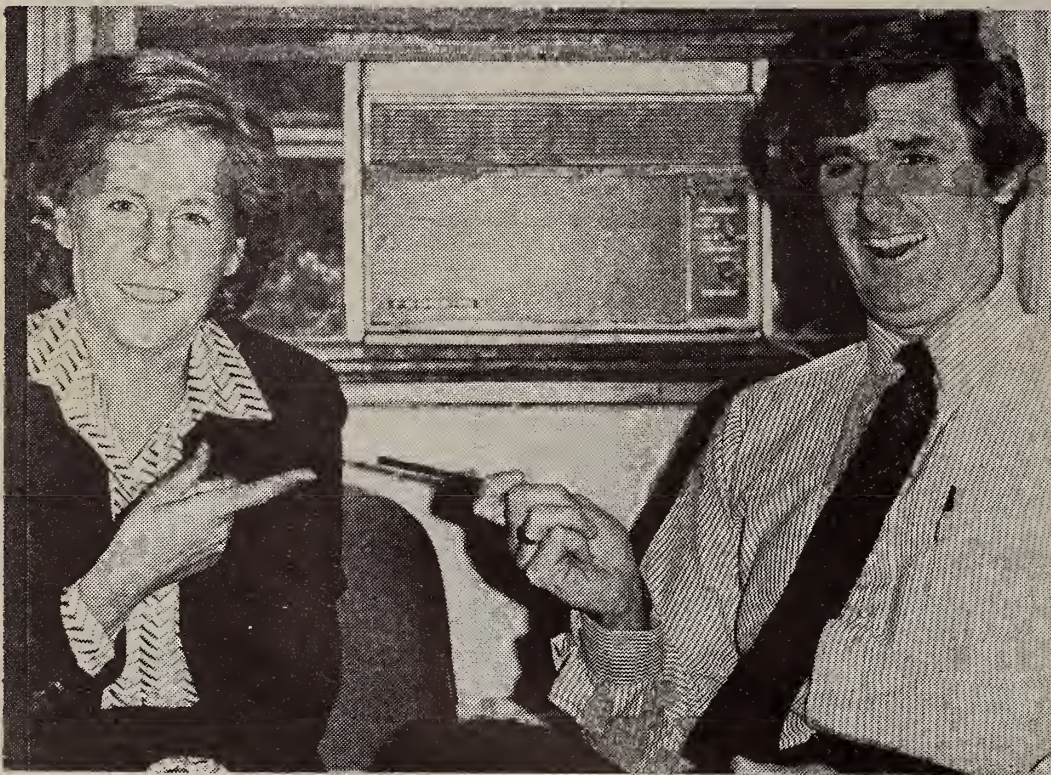

The similarities of name, location, and positions, have brought problems which have proven to be both humorous and enlightening for the Vicker couple. An invitation to a Campus Women's Dinner missed its "Marke" and went to Lon instead! Sob stories that should have found comfort with Lon, have instead, been left in a basket on Marke's doorstep. Inquisitive parents seeking Marke have assumed that Marke is a "Mr." and therefore see Lon, the real Mr. Vickers!

As well as all other things, the Vickers share a now refined sense of humor; so with grace and patience, the unusual situations are handled as well as the routine ones. If ever one is seeking visitation with one of the Vickers, keep the following in mind:

Dr. Lon Vickers, Associate Dean of Students, Student Life Office, Sanders Administration Bldg.

Mrs. Marke Vickers, Associate Director of Admissions, basement of the Sanders Administration Building.

A Fair Showing at Benefit Concert

By Mark Quigley

The guest emcee, Oedipus, had not yet arrived at showtime. Backstage, the band members hoped the audience, too, was on its way. But midway through the second band's set, the popular WBCN dj was in Weston auditorium - the student body wasn't.

Playing to an audience whose number didn't quite reach triple figures, The Form opened WFRC's first annual "Back to Books Benefit" Saturday night. The Fitchburg area band, a late add-on to the benefit's lineup, failed to move the crowd with their short set of "new blue" music.

Next on stage was the first of the three Boston-based bands. Native Tongue, a trio of energetic young musicians performed an electrifying set that broke the ice and had people bobbing in their seats as well as dancing in front of the stage. Featuring the vocals of bassist Louis Sel-vitella and drummer Mike Frackelton and highlighted by the soon-to-be-released song "Speaking in Captions," Native Tongues' performance turned out to be the biggest crowd-pleaser of the night.

The third scheduled band to appear in front of the people was V. Before they went on, however, there was a prolonged sound check that proved to be the beginning of the downfall of the night's events. During this intermission the already sparse audience thinned out some more and a sound engineer's error led to the malfunction of two amplifiers.

When V hit the stage, they were greeted by a mixture of applause and catcalls. As their show went on the cheering died down and the jeering increased until the drummer questioned, "how many of you are bored?" This seemed to spark up the audience for the remainder of V's distorted performance as they played a number of originals including a Talking Heads parody entitled "The Need."

Rod Davis, Tris Lozaw, Mike Glickman, and Jon Coe, better known as Someone and the Somebodies, took the stage as the final band of the concert. They played a tight, but shortened, set of their own style of art rock, apparently getting more enjoyment out of their music than did the remaining spectators. That was until Davis and Lozaw sang the "Bodies" version of the old Lee Dorsey tune "Working in a Coalmine." This song had quite a few of the listeners participating once again as they were out of their seats and dancing. But, as the lesser known songs (most notably "People Are Dumb," later dedicated by guitar/keyboard player Rod Davis to "the guy who screwed up the sound system") continued, Weston Auditorium became less populated and the only people still dancing were two members of the band's entourage. In other words, Someone and the Somebodies played, unfortunately, to almost Nobody.

Resource Center Needs Volunteers

Out of necessity, women of today must be more self-sufficient than ever before. Divorce is on the increase, and with this brings situations that a woman had not previously encountered. She must seek employment, possibly with no developed skills; learn to balance a checkbook, if she had not done so before; maintain an apartment and possibly a car. There must be a place to which these women may turn in time of need. With the cut-backs in funding both federally and on a state-wide basis, the number of social service organizations is diminishing. The Women's Resource Center, a program of the Leominster Multi-Service Center, was established to meet these and other needs of women.

Sometimes all that is required is someone to listen. A special person who will listen but not judge, who will understand but not criticize. The information and referral service is a very important part of the program. We try to research topics of importance to women, and have at least some of the answers for them.

Seminars on assertiveness, resume writing, insurance, and auto repair have proved to be of invaluable assistance to the women who attended. Support groups of people with common concerns give the woman an opportunity to share her thoughts, ideas, and frustrations about a topic which affects each of their lives.

All of this is available at no cost to the public, but we need your assistance. Volunteers are greatly needed to help staff the center. If you are a person who is sensitive to women's issues and to women, please, consider joining us at the Leominster Multi-Service Center. No previous experience is required, as we will provide a training program for all new volunteers. Do not feel that you do not have enough time to volunteer, a small commitment each week is all that is necessary. All help is greatly appreciated. Please call Barbara Abraham at 534-3828 if you would like to volunteer, or if you have any questions about the program.

Postdoctoral Science Programs

The National Research Council announces its 1982 Research Associateship Awards Programs for research in the sciences and engineering to be conducted in 18 federal research institutions - their laboratories are located throughout the United States. The programs provide Ph.D. scientists and engineers of unusual promise and ability with opportunities for research on problems largely of their own choosing yet compatible with the research interests of the supporting laboratory.

Initiated in 1954, the Associateship Programs have contributed to the career development of over 3,500 scientists ranging from recent Ph.D. recipients to distinguished senior scientists.

Approximately 250 new full-time Associateships will be awarded on a competitive basis in 1982 for research in chemistry, engineering, and mathematics, and in the earth, environmental, physical, space, and life sciences. Most of the programs are open to both U.S. and non-U.S. nationals, and to both recent Ph.D. holders and senior investigators.

Awards are made for a year with possible extensions through a second year; senior applicants may request shorter tenures. Stipends range from $22,400 a year for recent Ph.D.s to approximately $50,000 a year for Senior Associates. Allowances are made for relocation and for limited professional travel during tenure. The host federal laboratory provides the Associate programmatic support including facilities, support services, and necessary equipment.

Applications to the Research Council must be postmarked no later than Jan. 15, 1982. Awards will be announced in April.

Information on specific research opportunities and federal laboratories, as well as application materials, may be obtained from the Associateship Office, JH 610-D1, 2101 Constitution Ave., Washington, D.C. 20418, (202) 389-6554.

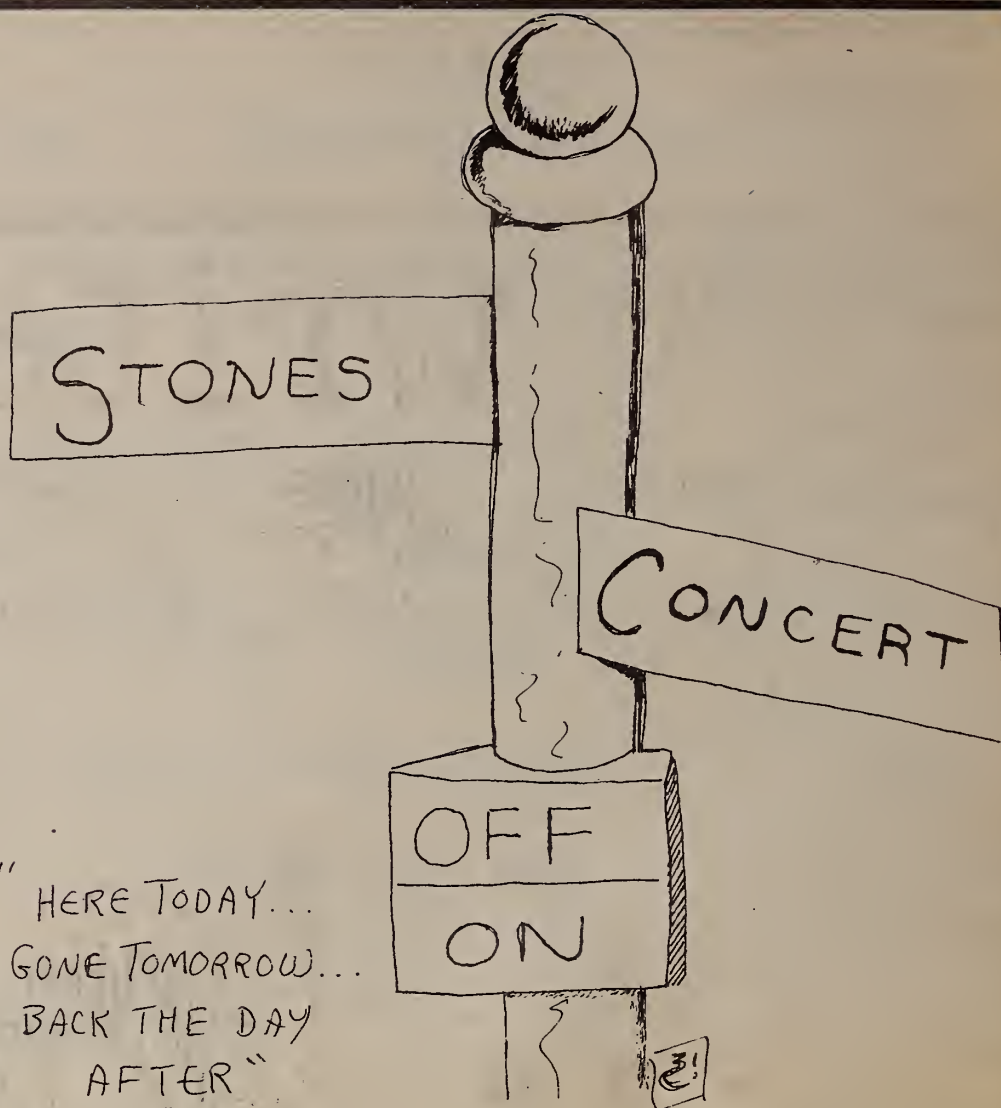

MART Curtails

Looking for Something Different?

By Donna LeCourt

There was a party on Sept. 14th that most Fitchburg students were not aware of. The party was a reception for Renee Rubin, an artist whose work is on display in the Campus Center Gallery. The display includes 32 watercolors and three oil paintings. All are landscapes done in a modern-style bordering on the abstract. Ms. Rubin describes her work:

"Primarily a landscape painter I simplify what I see into basic patterns and shapes to show what it is in each landscape that has special meaning for me.

Finding pleasure in diversity, I experiment with varieties of paper and use many different media: ink washes on Japanese paper, water colors on different papers, oil, pastel and monotypes.

My efforts aim to convey that special sense of place."

Renee Rubin lives in nearby Newton Center. She attended Jackson College, Tufts University and has taken courses and seminars from other prestigious schools such as Radcliffe. She studied art privately with a Boston artist.

She has done three solo exhibits of her work and participated in over a dozen group shows. She has only shown her work publicly in the last five years. Previously she raised a family, studied art and painted.

Ms. Rubin's work can be seen in the CC Gallery. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on weekends. The exhibit will be there through Oct. 9th.

Chorale Needs Voices

The Leonard Gaskins Chorale, Inc. of Fitchburg is preparing for a winter concert, including the complete performance of Handel's "Messiah." The concert is scheduled for Dec. 21st at 8 p.m. at the Christ Church, 569 Main St., Fitchburg. The chorale will be accompanied by the New England Youth Ensemble.

Voices for all sections are needed and encouraged. Mr. Gaskins, FSC chorus director, will accept new members through Oct. 8th. Requirements include enthusiasm, commitment and good sight reading ability.

Rehearsals are scheduled for Thursday nights from 7:15 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. in the music room of the McKay Campus School. For more information call 597-8921 afternoons or evenings, or 537-6606 late evenings.

Waldenbooks Will Open In Searstown

LEOMINSTER - Waldenbooks, the nation's leading book retailer, will be opening a full service bookstore in the Searstown Shopping Center in Leominster on Oct. 15.

The Searstown Shopping Center store will be stocked with more than 20,000 hardcover and paperback volumes to meet the needs and interests of the public with selections in more than 80 categories. A large magazine section will offer customers a choice of more than 200 of the most popular national and regional publications.

To celebrate the opening, there will be a drawing for a complete set of the 30-volume Encyclopedia Britannica Heirloom Edition valued at $1,199. No purchase is necessary to compete for the valuable prize.

An additional feature of all Waldenbooks stores is a "Books and Authors in the Media" section that features those titles that have either been reviewed locally, or been seen on popular talk shows. This enables customers who have read or heard about a book that is currently in the news to locate it even if they do not recall the title or author's name.

All Waldenbooks stores emphasize customer service and store personnel will be pleased to assist bookbuyers in finding books that they may have overlooked, or to assist in locating a special gift book. They will also special order virtually any book in print that is not in stock, or help customers find out-of-print books. Browsing is encouraged.

Harry Hoffman, president of Waldenbooks says, "Our aim is to make each of our stores an inviting cultural resource center, able to respond flexibly to local community interests."

Campus Center Cinema

This column, a regular offering of the newspaper, is meant to inform the student of free showings of popular films every Wednesday and Saturday in the Campus Center Lecture Hall, sponsored by the Programs Committee. Each column will cover all movies up to the next issue of Rhetoric, two weeks later.

This Saturday night, the CC offers the desert drama, "Laurence of Arabia," starring Peter O'Toole as T. E. Lawrence, a scholar, evaluating the Arab revolt against the German - Turkish alliance of 1916. Aided by the Arab rebel leader, Prince Feisal (Alex Guinness), Lawrence goes through many heroic adventures while gaining accolades for his military brilliance. The movie also stars Anthony Quinn, Jose Ferrer, Anthony Quayle, and Omar Sharif. The movie is over three and a half hours long so check times with the Campus Center before hand.

The real life "Laurence" is contrasted by the film version of Ray Bradbury's "Fahrenheit 451" Wednesday night. The plot is set in the future, when all reading material is banned and the television is referred to as the "propaganda screen". The job of a fireman in this time is to seek out and burn illegal reading materials. Montag (Oskar Werner) is very good at his job, but he is starting to doubt his role in the system as a fireman. He meets a young woman who is a member of the "Book People", who each memorize a classic from the past in order to preserve literature forever. Montag sees his home life deteriorate and subsequently becomes an outcast, joining up with the "Book People" in order to find the truth, himself and all other things that a good protagonist looks for. The movie also stars Julie Christie as Montag's wife.

Rock music, as well as literature can be considered a viable media, and Frank Zappa explores this medium in the film "200 Motels", next Saturday night. When first released in 1971, Time magazine called it "an act of aggression against the audience-rather like a mugging in a movie theater. Zappa makes movies the way he and his group make music - wildly, brazenly, eclectically." The review also states that "it helps that the movie is sometimes exceedingly funny." The title comes from a composition by Zappa that is "equal parts of Spike Jones, John Cage and Buddy Holly." The movie as a whole will never win any cinematic awards, but all in all it is one hell of a way to start off a Saturday night.

Music gives way to comedy as Mel Brooks' "High Anxiety" is shown on Wednesday, the 7th. Brooks stars as a psychiatrist working in an asylum helping inmates to conquer their own fears; unfortunately he himself is afraid of heights. This unlikely situation is not conducive to mental health but is a very, very funny film. But then again, what else would you expect from Mel Brooks?

Drama, Sci-Fi, Rock, and Comedy. Something for everyone is coming up, so go on out and see two or three of these FREE movies already.

A YEAR OUT OF COLLEGE, ANDA STRAUSS IS MAKING AVIATION HISTORY IN THE ARMY.

"I'm being assigned to a Chinook helicopter unit in Germany as a test pilot and maintenance officer, and I'm proud that I'll be the first woman to have that assignment over there. It's a real thrill for me.

"So was learning how to fly a helicopter. It takes a lot more skill than an airplane. If you think college is demanding, flight school is even tougher. It's not only academically demanding, it's really mentally demanding as well as physically.

"In Germany, I'll have a chance to use some of the leadership and management techniques I learned in ROTC. It's going to be a real challenge having command responsibilities.

2nd Lt. Anda Strauss was a political science major at Wake Forest and a member of Army ROTC.

"I got into ROTC really just to see what it was all about. For me, it all couldn't have worked out better."

JOHN MORRELL DIDN'T BECOME A TRAINEE AFTER COLLEGE. HE BECAME A MANAGER.

"As Executive Officer of the Army's Defense Language Institute at Monterey, California, I'm responsible for the housing, feeding and well-being of 500 students. And that's no small task. I manage an annual food budget of over a million and a half dollars. And I'm accountable for five million dollars worth of property.

"On top of managing money, I also supervise a staff of 24 people. And each one has unique problems that I have to handle on a daily basis. You better believe the leadership and management training I received in Army ROTC is paying off."

There are other good reasons for taking ROTC, too. Like scholarship opportunities. And financial assistance — up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of ROTC.

If you want a job after college that offers real challenge and real responsibility, do what John Morrell did. Take Army ROTC.

And begin your future as an officer.
